U.S. Asserts UN Sought Return of Occupied Lands

By David B. Ottaway Washington Fist Service

WASHINGTON -Secretary of State George P. Shultz disagreed Thursday with the view of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel that a United Nations resolution calling on Israel to withdraw from occupied Arab lands does not apply to the West Bank and Gaza

Testifving before a House appropriations panel. Mr. Shultz said that "each of the negotiations" to be held between Israel and its Arab plan must take place on the basis of an exchange of land for peace, as spelled out in UN Resolutions 242 and 338

The first resolution, adopted following the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, called for Israel's withdrawal "from territories occupied in the recent conflict." The second one was voted after the 1973 conflict and reaffirmed the same principle as the basis of any negotiations. Mr. Shamir replied Wednesday to the criticism of 30 senators who had signed a letter questioning his refusal in accept the "land-forpeace" formula. He said Israel had applied this principle when it re-turned the Sinai to Egypt as a result back in, saying, "Let the people of the 1978 Camp David Accords. But he argued that tho same

In Tokyo, a Move to Say 'Sayonara' to Government Offices

By Clyde Haberman New York Times Service

TOKYO - For 1,074 years Japan sank its imperial roots in Kyoto, a city of graceful temples and soothing gardens. Then in 1868, with the Meiji restoration, the national center was moved to Tokyo by the imperial government.

On and off ever since, the Japanese have wondered what a nice capital is doing in a city like this. The question is being raised once again with uncommon intensity, pressed by no less than Prime-Minister Noboru Takeshita, who says the time may have come to move the Japanese capital.

Tokyo is too expensive and too overdeveloped for the national good, Mr. Takeshita says. Japan, he adds, has become "two countries — the capital sphere and rest of the nation." It is only just, he insists, to spread the wealth.

Normally a man of monumental caution. Mr. Takeshita has moved on this matter with uncharacteristic speed since taking office in November, In January, his cabinet voted to relocate 31 agencies, representing at least one from every ministry, to prefectures outside Tokyo. Some of the selections were not exactly blockbusters. The finance minister presumably can get by without having his Research shift of an agency here or there. They want to move Institute of Brewing right at hand. Still, a new course was charted. Now a committee of the government and governing party is considering another 150 or so agencies for eviction from their Tokyo homes.

Tokyo-bashing in general has become a favorite pastime.

Last week, the head of a business group called the Japan Committee for Economic Development proposed that Tokyo colleges also be given the boot, to free land for housing and parks. He even included Japan's premier school. Tokyo University, which has been around since the 1850s when it was called the Institute for the Investigation of Barbarian Books.

Newspaper editorial writers have hopped aboard the bandwagon as well. "Overcrowding has gone much too far in Tokyo," the newspaper Asahi Shimbun complained recently. The city is like a grossly the entire government -lock, stock and pork barrel. Several committees are at work studying how to do it, including one with a mandate to issue a preliminary report next year and come up with firm specifics by 1991. This is not a panel of pipe dreams. It is headed by Shin Kanemaru, one of the country's most powerful politicians and a man on record as saying that Sendai, a pleasant city 200 miles (325 kilometers) north of Tokyo, would make a splendid national center. Other locations advocated by various interest groups are Nagoya, Osaka and new cities that would be created along the Sea of Japan or at the foot of Mount Fuji.

Some people even suggest returning the capital to Kyoto. "It all seems very unrealistic and ridiculous," said

Sec-ond, any time a party or faction shrinks, it becomes impossible to unify. When something shrinks, it factionalizes. So, if you did unify it, you would still lose — and you couldn't even unify it." This analysis, in the case of the Kemp campaign, proved accurate. From the start, Mr. Kemp was whipsawed on the right by such conservatives as Paul. Weyrich. Howard Phillips and Richard Vigueric, who criticized him for fail-ing to stress such issues as abortion and the threat of Communism.

Charlie Black, Mr. Kemp's mar ager, said Mr. Kemp's strong belief in building black Republican support created additional problems. "It wasn't the best possible appeal to some conservative leaders," Mr. Black said. "It made some of them ECTVOUS.

Recognizing the shrinkage of the conservative wing of the party, Mr. Bush set out in 1985 to divide it. This was a process that many thought demeaning, especially the night he gave a keynote speech at a dinner honoring Nackey S. Loeb, publisher of The Union Leader newspaper in Manchester, New Hampshire. Mr. Bush recited past editorials from the paper calling him an elitist born with a silver spoon in his mouth.

At the same time, he cultivated and won over the Reverend Jerry Falwell, leader of Moral Majority. "When you go hunting in a swamp, you get your boots dirty," an aide commented two years ago, ac-knowledging the harsh public crini-cism Mr. Bush received at the time.

"But now we've got time for a shoe shine before the primaries begin." Mr. Teeter put it differently: "You want to prevent anyone from getting one of those factions against you. You pay enough aftention to make sure you have a piece of them."

This strategy dovetailed with the cultivation of key party leaders who had supported Mr. Reagan early. Now in power, they were more than willing to line up with a candidate whose roots were as much in the Eastern establishment as in his adopted state of Texas. : While a number of campaign strategists question the importance of local endorsements and backing by party leaders, Bush officials contend that, in the South, such support can be critical. In South Carolina, for example,

Mr. Dukakis won a statistical victory by winning the most delegates, and from states most widely dispersed around the country; be won not only in New England and Maryland and Washington state but also in Florida and Texas. His detractors say be owes his victories to voters who are not quintessentially Southern in the traditional sense - south Texas Hispanics, south Florida condominium dwellers. There is something to that. But Texas and Florida are two of the nation's four largest states, and victories there cannot be dismissed as negligible.

A week ago Mr. Gore was generally written off as a candidate who could not find his pitch. But Tuesday night's results showed that he had been heard and accepted by large numbers of white Southern voters, who gave him victories in five states, second-place finishes behind Mr. Jackson in five others, a second behind Mr. Dukakis $\mathbf{B}_{\mathrm{on}\ \mathrm{an}\ \mathrm{Israeli}\ \mathrm{bus}\ \mathrm{deepens\ one's\ sense\ of}}$ foreboding for the Middle East. How can we hope for a negotiated way out of the conflict when the Palestine Liberation Organization uses the tactic of murderous assault on civilians?

"It does not stop the need for a settlement with the Palestinians. We don't have an alternative." That was the answer when 1 put the question to Yehoshafat Harkabi, an Israeli known for his hardheaded view of the realities facing the Jewish state. "The choice we face is not between good and bad," he said. "Every child can make that decision. It is between bad and worse. Israel cannot dominate the Palestinians. We must recognize their right to political expression in their own entity, which means a state in the West Bank and Gaza." A retired general who once headed Israeli military intelligence, Professor Harkabi now teaches strategy at the Hebrew University. He wrote for years about the Arabs' hatred for Israel. But he came to believe that some had accepted the necessity to accommodate — and that Israel must seek accommodation with the Palestinians.

Mr. Harkabi spelled ont his views in a lecture in Tel Aviv last month, published by the Jerusa-lem Post. His stark conclusion was: "Reality will force Israel to withdraw from the [occupied territories and to oegotiate with the PLO." His reason was that the alternative of holding onto the territories was more dangerous. "With difficulty," he said, "a state can de fend poor borders, of the kind we will have after withdrawing from the West Bank and Gaza, but it cannot defend itself if half its population "Postponement of an accommodation will tion - reinforced by the knowledge that the moderation of their stand was for nought "Moderation will not come from the Arah side unless it is certain to be rewarded, as Sadat was certain. The Hussein-Arafat proposal of 1985, hased on the principle of a willingness to make peace in return for a withdrawal from the territories occupied in 1967, met total rejection from the Israeli side ....

"We will have to negotiate with the Palestin-ians, the majority of whom, in any referendum, would vote for the PLO as their representative ... 1 am not claiming that the PLO is a pleasant organization; it is ugly in both theory and practice. But we negotiate not because we have awarded our adversary a certificate of good be-havior — but because he is an adversary ... "In the past the Palestinians claimed that only they and not the Jews deserved a state. Meantime, some of their leaders have moved away from that position. We can't expect them to agree that only the Jews should have a state."

Those few excerpts cannot really convey the force of Mr. Harkabi's words. In person he radiates the energy of commitment. Even in print one senses the man who has devoted his life to the defense of his country and now sees it endangered by the folly of trying to rule over lands inhabited by an antagonistic people. The terrorist attack has not changed his analysis or his boos

- or his hope. So I found when I called him in Jerusalem. "I still believe a settlement is possible." he said. "That is because I think both parties will see the calamities that face them otherwise. I don't expect the Palestinians to be nice or the Jews to be nice, but to recognize their interests." He spoke warmly of Secretary of State George West Bank and Gaza, then an international conference. He said an active U.S. role was essential: don't want pressure. I want frankness."

A "deep change" is under way in Israel, he said. "People are starting to understand that we cannot keep the West Bank. There is great bewilderment. Probably people are awakening and realizing that what they thought is not true."

The road of negotiation will not be an easy ne. There is no easy way for Israel. Mr. Harkabi's point is one of realism, of choices. Whatever the risks of negotiating an exchange of territory for peace, they are less than the mortal danger of saying no to negotiation and trying to rule the West Bank and Gaza forever.

It Took Lots of Money

Except for Albert Gore guining at Richard Gephardt's expense, it turned out the way people expected. George Bush walloped Bob Dole, Michael Dukakis did well in the nontraditional South, Jesse Jackson did very well among blacks. So why was it shocking?

Because it brought us face to face with the beast: a sudden quantum jump in the need for money. No disrespect for the candidates' other qualities, but please ootice that those who had lots of money to spend, like Mr. Bush, Mr. Gore and Mr. Dukakis, won on Tuesday; those who didn't, like Mr. Dole and Mr. Gephardt, lost. Well, that's right, but where's the shock?

Everyone has known all along that money is the mother's milk of politics.

You are missing the point. The shock comes from the abrupt change of scale, the need for millions of dollars at once. For two months, the campaign embodied the romance of democracy. Real candidates met skeptical people in clapboard cottages and snowy farms. Retail politics. Oh sure, we knew that by the fall the campaigns would become costly, impersonal, wholesale, But during the early weeks, romance ruled.

Don't get carried away. The romance has never lasted through the primary season. By the time the candidates moved on to Florida or Ohio or California, they always had to campaign wholesale, with expensive television.

But they did it week by week. The cam-paign screened out candidates gradually. Voters had time to learn about the candidates, and candidates had time to raise money, one race at a time. Now comes Super Tuesday. Instead of hitting six lowa towns a day by bus, candidates had to tour six states a day by jet. Instead of bringing maple bars to kaffeeklatsches, they had to spend millions on television. How else can you try to cover 20 states in 21 days? The New York

Super Tuesday turned out to be a shock. in the Super Tuesday states? More than 150! You're still being romantic. We have fin ished this year's Norman Rockwell stage. It's time to get serious and narrow the field. Says who? Voters in the Super Tuesday states got shortchanged. They didn't hear much of what the candidates have to say. They got 30-second TV spots, at best. Not many candidates could afford to air even those in many places. You probably saw that Mr. Gore spent $3 million on TV ads, Mr. Dukakis $2 million and Mr. Gephardt $1 million. The dollar difference shows in the vote totals. There is a lot to disagree with in Mr. Gephardt's message - but many voters never got the chance to agree or disagree with the message. They never beard it. Same with Mr. Dole, Mr. Bush had the money to blanket the territory. Mr. Dole didn't even nick his shots very well.

So what would you do about it? The campaign finance law already covers presidential primaries, with federal matching money for candidates and spending limits by state.

The funding system was designed for the week-by-week system. When you impose something as big as Super Tuesday, you throw the funding out of whack. It is probably destructive for candidates suddenly to oced so much mooey, all at once, and so early in the campaign. But what's your answer? You can't keep states from holding primaries on the same day. No, but if they insist on a near-national primary, Congress could at least revise the campaign finance law. Candidates then ought to qualify for federal matching money before Jan. 1; the obsolete $1,000 limit on individual contributions ought to be raised. The alternative is for the Republican and Democratic parties to lean on the states to space out the races. That would space out the financial burden. That in turn would give candidates more time to make their cases

Mr. Gorbachev's success to date is based in large measure on his leader-ship style. Some would argue, broadly, that he is doing for the Soviet Union with perestrolka what Franklin Roo-sevelt did for America with the New Deal. That remains to be seen. What is clear is that by 1985 the Soviet people

Despite continuing unrest in the So-viet bureaucracy and in the provinces, and despite the stubborn reluctance of gic and despondent about the future. the Soviet economy to produce bene-fits for consumers, Mr. Gorbachev has demonstrated a surprising resilience. The success of his bold reforms is by years. He talked freely about unpleasno means assured, but there is oo longer any doubt that he has become the world's most dynamic leader. That the United States's principal Nikolai Bukharin; receiving Andrei adversary should have such a leader is clearly a challenge for Washington. It is even more so in light of the scrious economic problems America faces and the declining ability of both the great survival of the Communist government there; coucluding a nuclear arms agreement that opened Soviet territory to foreign military inspection and powers to shape and influence events. Under Mr. Gorbachev, the Soviet called for asymmetrical cuts of medi-

By John Edwin Mroz

The Resilient Gorbachev Starts His Fourth Year

This arms agreement has led to a new Soviet phenomenon: a rich flow of letters to the editors of Soviet newspapers and magazines, asking why the Soviet Union agreed to such an asymmetrical reduction of weapons. When Mr. Gorbachev's breezes ac-celerated into winds of change, he began to meet resistance. He took away the "privilege" of alcohol and exhorted his people to work harder. His perestroika, with its emphasis on qual-ity over quantity in manufacturing and its tolerance of temporary memployment, earned him the support of the intelligentsia and the ennity of bureaucrats and many consumers. In short, he made himself vulnerable.

Recent ethnic disturbances in Azerbaijan, Armenia and the Baltic repub-lics, while oot uncommon occurrences in the 70-year history of the Soviet. state, have further underscored that vulnerability. How far can Mr. Gorba-chev's policy of glasnost go without mleasting nationalistic forces that are impossible to control without large-scale bloodshed? And what will the Soviet leader do if major instability in a Warsaw Pact country should seem to call for military intervention? For all the change of the last three years, the biggest changes and issues surely lie ahead. Nouetheless, the tough Soviet leader has been pushing tongn soviet leader has been pushing ahead without any signs of hesitation, thus earning the begrudging admira-tion of people like Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain. Mr. Gorbachev's popularity in the West is in part attributable to a genu-ime hope that the Soviet Union will become a more burnary arrowsible become a more humane, responsible and integrated member of the international community. While the West should not indulge in inflated expecta-tions of what Mr. Gorbachev could accomplish, neither should it underes-timate what he has already done. Nor should it understate the potential value of a leader who has a sense of where he wants to take his country.

In any society, leadership requires both vision and determination to say and do what is necessary, however unpopular, At a time when Americans are themselves trying to select the man who will best be able to lead their country, Mr. Gorbachev stands as a reminder of the essence of leadership.

The administration believes that the consequences would be far from minor - for reasons that remind you of the changing U.S. position in the world. #### Britain, Tibet, Hong Kong

The causes of Tibet and Hong Kong converge in the extent to which Britain appears prepared to make concessions to Beijing. While in Britain, the Chinese foreign minister will have every opportunity to put his government's view, in private and in public. Next month, when the Dalai Lama - the religious leader of the Tibetans who fled the country in 1959 - visits Britain, he will have none of these opportunities. He has been expressly forhidden from making "political statements." This condition for his visit, which has already been condemned as a violation of the International Covenant on Human Rights, appears designed to save China embarrassment. The inference can be drawn that the Foreign Office has sacrificed the principle of free speech for the sake of tranquil relations with China - possibly to safeguard future trade; probably to prevent new difficulties over Hong Kong. The wisdom of such a move is highly questionable. It suggests that Britain is prepared to placate China even at the cost of cherished democratic principles. The time may come, after 1997, when there is no choice. But that is nine years hence.

J ACKSON, Mississippi — In his novel "Black Boy," Riebard Wright dramatically captured black alignation from the American South. Born in Mississippi, Mr. Wright fled the South to launch his career as a writer. His flight was a tale familiar to thousands of black people who left a region known for slavery and Jim Crow to seek better jobs and living conditions in the North. The novelist chronicled this experience in his fiction, showing the grim world that black people faced in the South. Like many other Southern black artists, he felt he could not live and create in a society that denied his manhood. While his fellow Mississippian William Faulkner remained at home in Oxford, Mr. Wright found his home outside the region, first in Chicago and later in Paris.

In 1987 his daughter, Julia, flew from Paris to receive on behalf of her late father an award of distinction from the University of Mississippi. While in the state, she visited her la-

Bush looks like Mondale: invincible in March, unelectable in November.

16 years after the McGovernization of the Democratic Party, the presidency may be won by the severely liberal governor of the only state Mr. McGovern carried. The Southern primary, intended to en-liance conservative tendencies in the Democratic Party, has particularly rewarded the least conservative candidates. Mike Dukakis and Jesse Jackson, But before Republicans rejoice, they should reconnoiter that territory frequently igdored by them in the Reagan era: reality. George Bush's Super Tuesday success coincided with the publication of poll data that should seem ominous to any Republican not utterly sedated by the bobris that has come with Mr. Reagan's victories. Consider, for example, the Field poll in California, a state with 17 percent of the electoral votes needed to win in November, a state that has voted Republican in five consecutive elections and eight of the last nine, In November, the Field results were: Bush 49; Dukakis 36, undecided 15. Last week's results were: Dukakis 52, Bush 43, undecided 5. Even Dick Gephardt has surged past Mr. Bush. November: Bush 49, Gephardt 33, undecided 18. Now: Gephardt 46, Bush 41, undecided 13. If Mr. Dukakis and Mr. Gephardt are

"dwarfs," what does that make Mr. Bush - a dwarfette? Mr. Dukakis's Field result is a 22-

point turnaround, from 13 behind to mine ahead. And the undecided vote is interestingly small, Mr. Bush bas been for years a nationally known commod-ity. Mr. Dukakis is still harely known "" nationally, Before the political season moves west, political news moving west dies in the Mojave Desert. Californians are not yet paying attention to Mr. Dukakis or any other new face. So the -Field result reflects a substantial any-

Peter Hart's polling shows Mr. Bush and Mr. Dukakis neck-and-neck nationally. Lou Harris finds Mr. Bush tied with Mr. Gephardt and losing by three points tie with Mr. Dukakis. This poll, like the Field and Harris polls, shows Boh Dole stronger in a general election.

Mr. Dukakis has not yet quite won, but Mr. Gephardt is vulnerable to negative ads ridiculing his anti-establishment pose and his ideological somersaults, and he is strapped for cash to pay for responses Albert Gore has done well, but with a strategy that depends on Mr. Dukakis stumbling. Now the marathon moves to expensive Northern primaries hospitable to the well-heeled Dukakis campaign.

Actually, Mr. Gore's success may benefit Mr. Dukakis and Democratic prospects by raising the intellectual con-tent of the debate and drawing Mr. Dukakis rightward. Mr. Dukakis, who already is beaung Mr. Bush, is becoming a better campaigner and acquiring stature as victories accelerate de-dwarfization. Speaking of intellectual content, the unbearable lightness of Mr. Bush's campaign may be incurable. A Bush aide promises, "We're going to heavy-up the speeches" (aides come to talk like their bosses), and Lord knows there is room for weight. (Mr. Bush on arms control: "Hit a lick for peace!" On potential perils: "If this country ever loses its interest in fishing, we've got real trouble." Touring Auschwitz: "Boy, they were big on crematoriums, weren't they?") His he-hum-filled campaign has been made pos-sible by his proximity to Mr. Reagan and by the fact that so many early contests have been concentrated where Mr. Reahave been concernation have gan is particularly popular. Mr. Bush's November vulnerability is revealed in the simple arithmetic of politi-revealed in the simple arithmetic of political subtraction. Starting with blue-collar ethnics, take away all the groups that Mr. Reagan carried but Mr. Bush cannot.

Reagan carried but Mr. Bush cannot. Republican screnity is exceeded, and perhaps explained, by Republican forget-fulness. The last time a Republican non-incumbent ran (Mr. Reagan, 1980), he got just 50.7 percent of the vote. Would Mr. Bush running against Mr. Dukakis be stronger than Mr. Reagan running against a discredited Jimmy Carter? In 1984, in the teeth of the Reagan typhoon, Democrats won 65 percent of typhoon, Democrats won 65 percent of all contested elections. Would Mr. Dukakis drive away, as Mr. Mondale did, millions who are disposed to vote Dem-ocratic? Would Mr. Bush, the Republi-cans' Walter Mondale (invincible in March, unelectable in November), overcome that disposition? The clarification of the Democratic contest is coming just a tad too late for the good of Republicans. The strength of the strongest Democratic candidates is becoming apparent too late to raise in Republican minds the matter of Mr. Bush's electability. So we are going to test the proposition of the Democrat who said of his party, "If we can't beat Bush, we should pick another country."

Examine All the Causes

I read the opinion column by Robert J. I read the optition column by Robert J. Samuelson entitled "Reaganomics Ends Up More a Slogan Than a Policy" (Feb. 27) with some sympathy but considerable skepticism. While 1 have my own criti-cisms of Reagan administration policy, 1 have great difficulty in following an argu-ment that places the entire hurden of budget definits and trade implalence on budget deficits and trade imbalances on applications of any economic theory within the domestic economy. Such thinking is vintage 19th century. If we talk about inflation or trade deficits, it would seem necessary also to talk abont the international oil production and market systems. Their effects on the U.S. domestic economy have not been inconsequential. One must also talk about the Japanese and their economic capabilities and subsequent effects on U.S. international competitiveness. And one must discuss the American work ethic and U.S. capability to compete in rapidly changing international conditions, not just against the Japanese hut also the Taiwanese, Singa-poreans, Malaysians, Thais and many nations in other areas of the world.

President Ronald Reagan has dooe little to improve the U.S. competitive position, but surely he is not entirely to blame for American culture and history, or for the rapidly evolving international economic environment. In determining what has gone wrong, we must look at all the possible 20th-century causes. LLEWELLYN HOWELL. Kuala Lumpur.

This was one of the few chances such people had to pass time with their neighbors; their farms were many miles apart and they were too busy with chores to allow for casual dropping-in. It was a lonely life, but the inefficiency of the postal system made it less so. With the efficiency of Rural Free Delivery came more time to sow and reap, milk and feed. Yet something else came as well: the death of the general store as a social institution. As the historian Daniel Boorstin writes, "From every farmer's doorstep there now ran a highway to the world. I just invoke my telecom program and there they are. It's a place."

Professor Postman, mentioned earlier, is the author of a brilliant book called Amusing Ourselves to Death: Public Discourse in the Age of Show Business' (Viking). In it he postulates something that would have startled George Orwell. He says that Big Brother is here --it is 1988, after all -- but he is not spying on people; they are reporting in to him. Big Brother is not an interloper in modern society, he is a guest. In "Walden," Thoreau wrote, "Lo! Men have become the tools of their tools." The tool with which I am most familiar is television, a medium that has, for purposes of this argument, two salient characteristics: the size of its images and its location in the house.

Going to the movies is an event: One has to do some planning (perhaps ar-range for a haby sitter) and event effort (drive a certain distance and search for a parking space) to make it happen. Psychologically, the size of images on a movie screen creates distance between the moviegoer and the actors, making the latter almost Olympian, Whatever else one feels for the men and women on the

EC Reimposes Ban

On Meat Hormones European Community agriculture ministers reinstated this week a total ban on the use of growth hormones in meat pro-duction in all 12 member nations. The EC directive, which took effect Jan. I, had been annulled on a technicality in a ruling Feb. 23 by the European Court of Justice. The court supported a legal motion by Britain that the EC had used the wrong procedures. The British had held that national sovereignty over questions of consumer protection was at stake. After the court ruling, the European Commission resubmitted its original proposals.

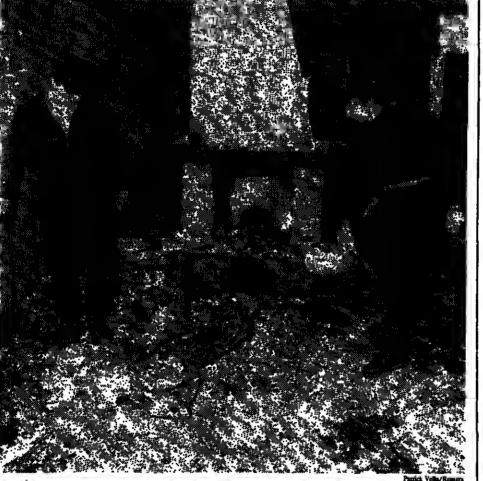

The hormone ban was ap-proved in December 1985 and all member nations bave since passed their own legislatioo to comply with the directive. The EC originally proposed to also ban imports of hormone-treated meat as of Jan. 1. But the start of the import ban was postponed anti- uext Langury after the United States, contending the ban was an unfair trade practice, threat-ened to retaliate by raising tariffs on EC food imports.

Kidnapping Stymies Netherlands Police

Six months after Gerrit Jan Heijn, No. 2 executive for the retail chain Ahold NV, disappeared on his way to the dentist, the Dutch police say they are still baffled by the Netherlands' longest kidnap case. A spokesman said the police had given up hope of a solution soon and would drastically reduce the number of investigators oo the case, which stood at 80 at the height of the investigation.

Mr. Heijn, 57, was kidnapped Sept. 9 near his home in Haarlem. His family negotiated with his captors, who sent the end of one of Mr. Heijn's fingers to prove they held him. They demanded a ransom of 25 million guilders ($12.5 million at the time) in cash and diamonds. In November, the family delivered $4 million, hut a subsequent attempt to hand over a similar amount went wrong.

The kidnappers have not conlacted the family since late December. Despite receiving 12,000 tips from the public about the abduction, the police have not found any trace of Mr. Heijn or his captors. The Justice Ministry has said Mr. Heijn is presumed dead.

Netherlands 'Museumland'

The Netherlands is said to have the most varied concentration of museums in the world. There are more than 800, and this year, designated the year of the museum, special exhibitions are planned in 550 of them. The pro-gram, called "Museumland," was intended to attract atgram, called "Museumland," was intended to attract at-tention to less well-known collections, but major museums may again steal the limelight. The Frans Hals Museum in Haarlem, celebrating its 75th year, is staging special showings of the Dutch master's work — still lifes from April 24 to the end of May and portraits of civic guards, May 11 to July 17. The Gemeentenutseum in The Hague is putting on the largest-ever exhibition of the work of Diat Mondeian with more than 25th work by the art of Piet Mondrian, with more than 250 works by the arr-ist and, concurrently, a show of 19th-century Dutch land-scape paintings, drawings and watercolors of The Hague School Both run until May 29. The history of the Many travel agents can help plan a trip to Cozumel (10 miles off-shore from Kailuum), Isla Mnjeres miles south of the airport. The bungalows were booked for the rest of the week, but Lafitte's or Cancun, hut if you ask about accommodations in the rest of the next-door neighbor, Kailuum (which had no sign along the highstate of Quintana Roo, they might look at you as if you'd expressed interest in going to the moon. A travel agent in Mexico City told my way), would have space - tent space, that is - in three days. My hushand was ready to move in on the spot; I wasn't sure I wanted to spend five days in a tent. Once we checked in, I tumbled almost in-stantly to Kailuum's desert-island hushand and me that there were no other hotels in Quintana Roo. Though there's nothing you have to do at Kailuum, there's plenty to keep you busy. On the practically deserted beach, under an immense palapa, is the dining room. Avail-able all day at the bar there, on the honor system, are bottled mineral water, beer and mixed drinks. One can borrow a paperback book from the dining room library and mosey down the beach another 40 feet to a circular palapa, the "hammock cathedral" where 14 or so bammocks fan out like streamers from a maypole. The view of the Caribhean is crystal clear, the same one you have from almost every seat in the dining room.

NOTHER few hundred feet A down the beach are Capi-tán Lafitte's bungalows, where snorkeling gear can be rented and arrangements made to scu-ha dive, Kailuum's guests are free to use Lafitte's swimming pool and dining facilities. Lafitte's guests can get vouchers to dine at Kailuum. Lafitte rents cars at rates cheaper than those quoted at the airport (currently about $60 a day for a Volkswagen or a K-car in-cluding collision damage insurance and free mileage).

One of the region's extensive patch recis provides calm waters for Kailuum's crescent-shaped beach, and a haven for parrotfish, French angelfish, blue angelfish, damselfish and an occasional sea

HURCHILL, Canada - You don't have to look far to see polar bears when you camp out with them on the shores of Hudson Bay near Churchill, Canada, in Manitoba province. Even at the cocktail bour, when you're having a snotch (Scotch poured over a cup of snow) and a smoked oyster, you're likely to hear and feel half a ton of bear slarn against the school bus that serves the camp's meals and smack its black snout against a frosted windowpane inches from your face. It's Alfie, Maxwell, Metal Mama or one of their fellow bears telling you they're bungry, too. In this part of the world Ursus maritimus (or Thalarctos maritimus), as the polar bear is classified, lives most of the year on the ice covering Hudson Bay. From mid-November to early summer it kills and gorges itself on seals as they come up through hreathing holes in the ice. By July the melting of the ice forces the bears ashore where their meager food supply consists of berries, lichen, sca-weed, mosses and grasses. As a result, they lose up to 300 pounds (135 kilograms) by October when hundreds of them gather near the town of Chnrchill to wait for the hay to freeze again.

It is then, when the temperature starts dropping below zero and the wind begins gusting to 40 miles (64 kilometers) an hour, that a few hearty people come to watch the bears.

Good Lord! Look at that beautiful creature," said Dan Guravich, the guide and cook, who interrupted his basting of a turkey to watch a bear approach the camp. As many as a dozen bears sur-round the camp at a time. Among them are usually at least one mother teaching a cub or two to imitate her every move. If she digs in the snow for kelp, they dig; if she chases away male bears twice her size lest they cat her cubs, the little ones also rum — sometimes slightly in front of their mothers — chasing off the males, which are up to eight times their size. Sometimes visitors will see the mother lying back on a snowbank nursing ber offspring. The males put on their own show by play fighting with one another for hours on end. The action starts when two males saunter up to each other, touch noses, then lock jaws for a minute. Formalities aside, they stand on their hind legs and throw punches at each other's chest. After a long sparring match, one bear will roll over on his hack, legs straight up in the air and fend off the bear still afoot. The restraint of these animals, which can kill a seal with one whack of their mighty, clawed, foot-wide paws, justifies their nickname: gentle gi-

They are the kind who use 600 millimeter lenses that look like small howitzers. Others with simpler cameras are just as happy snapping photos when they can get the line in the circle of their light meter. And some people just like to sit and watch the bears.

What unites the 16 to 19 people of various ages in each group at the camp is not photographic skills but love of wildlife and enjoyment of a rugged trip to get to it. They thrive on the knowledge that they are among the few who have ever shared this experience.

Many exotic trips demand that one possess extraordinary physical skills. This one only requires that one's back and bones can take being jostled in a tundra buggy, a vehicle that rides high above balloon tires. It takes visitors from Churchill to the camp, a trip of about two hours, and also makes for ays around the camp. The visitor must also be able to control his killer instinct when the person next to him opens a door or window 10 take the 44th photo of the same bear and lets in another blast of subarctic air. WHEN you first handle a Patek Philippe, you become aware that this watch has the presence of an object of rare perfection.

We know the feeling well. We experience it every time a Patek Philippe leaves the hands of our craftsmen. You can call it pride. For us it lasts a moment; for you, a lifetime.

We made this watch for you - to be part of your

THE FREQUENT TRAVELER

Where to Get the Answers To Your Global Questions

by Roger Collis

F your travel agent is able to come up with answers to questions such as, do U.S. citizens need a visa for Argentina (yes) or how much local currency are you allowed to bring in to Greece (25,000 dracbmas), the chances are he looked it up in the Travel Information Manual (TIM), a lexicon of lore (and law) on official requirements for entering more than 200 countries. Ask him about business hours and babits in Jordan (avoid meetings on Fridays and during Ramadan) and he will probably first consult the ABC Guide to International Travel and for exhaustive information, the World Travel Guide. He may turn up a hotel for you through the Official Airline Guides' Travel Planner/Hotel & Motel RedBook or the ABC World Hotel Guide.

These are all source books that the individual or corporate traveler should consider acquiring.

The best way to plan flights and keep up with fares is to subscribe to a printed or electronic edition of an ABC or OAG airline gnide. Unlike airlines' computer reservations systems, they are complete and impartial. Both have been publishing airline timetables and fares for decades. They each have worldwide editions, massive monthly tomes (OAG has a separate North American editioo that is updated twice a month) and monthly pocket guides for the individual oo the move. ABC has two pocket guides: Europe-Middle East and North Africa, which cootains air and rail schedules and connections to key U.S. and Far East gateways, and an Asian edition. OAG has three pocket guides: Europe-Middle East-Africa, Pacific and North

IM, the ABC Guide to International Travel, the World Travel Guide and the OAG Travel Planner tell you what to expect once you arrive.

TIM is an austere 380-page manual of official entry requirements, procedures and restrictions for airline passengers in nearly 200 countries. The printed edition is published every month in the Netherlands, Airlines and travel agents can access the TIM data base in Atlanta, which is updated every day. The book goes into exhaustive detail on immigration rules: passports, visas, bealth certificates, customs, currency, for all nationalities. For example, it devotes oearly eight pages to passport and visa require-ments for the United States and four pages to customs regulations. Except for brief advice oo health precautions such as malaria and yellow fever, it doesn't make qualitative judgments. Petrof Linaras, TIM's editor, said: "I'm involved with the documentation that is required; I'm not an expert on personal pro-tection of the passenger. We doo't contact embassies and consulates for information but go straight to our own local airline sources. This is wby there are sometimes deviations with other publications such as ABC. They may bave regulations as in the law; what we bave is bow the law is applied." ABC's Guide to International Travel, published quarterly (110 pages), doesn't quite live up to its blurb. But it does serve as a brief introduction to places you want to visit for the first time (188 countries are listed). It has similar information to TIM on passports, visas, health and customs (though not nearly as detailed) along with distances from major airports, climate, business hours and business and social hints -- more or less what you'd expect from a good desk diary. There is also an electronic edition.

Uoder each country you'll find an abundance of information on passport/visa/customs requirements (not as exhaustive as TIM, but with more practical details of where to apply for visas and what you oeed). health precautions, money (with exchange rate history), most acceptable credit cards, transportation to and within the couotry (including journey times), accommodations (phone oumbers of hotel chains), eating and drinking, social and business hints, and geo-graphical, historical, political and ecocomic profiles. Useful features are lists of information sources, and a section on travel insuranc way around an airport, setting downtown and choosing a hotel. It comes out quarterly in three regional editions — North America, Europe and Pacific Asia — and comple-ments the other guides. It gives airport dia-grams (everything from check-in desks to restaurants andher facilities) and more phone numbers than you'll ever oeed (car reotals, airlines, and rail and road transportion). It even tells you bow to make calls. There are 35,000 hotels listed (10,000 in Europe, 3,000 in Asia/Pacific and 22,000 in North America). Rates are quoted in U.S. dollars and local money; categories conform to government rating systems (except for the United States, where the Mobil ratings are used). And botels are marked on simple city maps. Subscribers to the electronic edition of OAG flight guide have access to hotel information in the OAG Travel Planner.

The ABC Worldwide Hotel Guide (pub-lished twice a year) has 36,000 entries, in-cluding 12,000 in Europe. It is included as part of a subscription to the ABC World Airways Guide but can be purchased separately.

ONDON --- Of the many British gar-dens that will be on display this spring, few can match the history surrounding the Royal Mausoleum at Frogmore. By permission of her great-great-granddaughter, the public has access each spring to Queen Victoria's most treasured and private memorial to Prince Albert. Hidden in the shadow of Windsor Castle, the mausoleum and gardens of Frogmore House are opened in aid to charity for a few days each year — this year on May 4 and 5, May 18 (gardens only) and May 25 (mausoleum only).

Queen Victoria adored her husband, the Prince Consort, and mourned his death some 40 years before ber own with a passion that many in England have believed bordered on the insane. The Queen covered the landscape with Albert memorials: a stone to mark where he shot his last stag at Balmoral; another for his last shoot at Windsor; a colossal Highland statue in Perth - complete with a vast bronze kilt -- and the Albert Memorial in Kensingtoo across from the Royal Albert Hall. The Royal Mausoleum was her private memorial to him, a place she knew she would share with him one day, and to which she fled for solace and counsel when the solace and counsel of the living fell short.

The gardens surrounding the Royal Mau-soleum are part of Windsor Home Park, the private gardens of Windsor Castle, 20 miles (32 kilometers) west of London. The 13 acres (five bectares) were landscaped by Sir Uve-dale Price around Frogmore House, which was acquired by the royal family in the late 18tb century for Queen Charlotte and rebailt in a Georgian manner by James Wyatt. Jo In a Georgian manner by James Wyatt, lo those days the house and gardens were a place of life and gaiety. Queen Charlotte held several garden fetes at Frogmore, the first of which, in May 1795, was attended by more than 2,000 guests. Queen Mary, when still Princess Mary, entertained at Frogmore House during Ascot Week. When queen, she often escaped here from London, bringing her children to play in the gardens while she sat and read or wrote beceath a lime tree.

By the earlier queen, Victoria, who eterished Frogmore most as a secluded haven for writing letters and working at ber dispatch boxes, "I am sitting in this dear lovely garden where all is Peace & quiet & you can only hear the burn of the bees and the singing of the birds. . . . ft does my poor excited, worried nerves — good!" In winter she would watch Prince Albert skate oo the garden pond.

Albert died of typhoid on Dec. 14, 1861 (he was just 42), but not before be and the queen had made known their wishes for a last resting place. They bad considered building a mausoleum for themselves - a custom of the German Saxe-Coburg family from which Albert and Victoria's mother were descended - when neither was more than 24 (they were the same age). Within four days of his death Victoria had chosen the site - close to that of her mother's recently completed mausoleum in Frogmore Gardens.

The entrance to the gardens is via the Park Street gate onto what is known as the Long Walk. Three miles long and straight as an arrow south from Windsor Castle, the Long Walk was carved out in 1685 and outlined with Dutch elms. Uotil the disastrous Dutch elm disease swept England, the Long Walk was the predominant feature of the countryside from the castle walls. The trees are now plane and chestnut, and lead to an equestri-an statue of Queen Victoria's grandfather, George III. Inside, the gardens are a rolling, mass of tender green grasses shot through with daffodils, cherry blossoms, camellias, azaleas and rhododendrons. Arched bridges fly the fontpaths over small bodies of water and each apparently natural undulation of the land is punctuated by a miniature archi-tectural masterpiece — the mausoleums, Frogmore House, a folly. The Royal Mausoleum, designed by A.J. Humbert, an architect favored by Albert, lies to the right of the public entrance to the gardens. It sits at a strange angle, as if perched there deliberately to face some eternal wonder oot visible to the eyes of any less royal than those resting within. The Romansque-style edifice seems to rest on an altar of its own, approached by a lower and upper flight of stairs, the upper of regal black Galway marble. Don't let a long line of people cause you to miss the awesome view of the mausoleum from the bottom of the steps who was both queen and empress to much of the civilized world. It was this queen, ruler of the British Empire for over 60 years, who continued after his death to lay out her hisband's clothes each night with hot water and clean towel. Dec. 14, the day of his death, became known to Victoria's vast family as Mausoleum Day, when all were expected to attend the annual service there.

Victoria did not want the Royal Mausoleum to be a grim vault in the Germanic tradition but a bright monument to Albert's fiving glory and hers. The style of the interior is triumphant rich Italian high Renaissance and the queen directed that as much as possible of the painting and sculpture should ground for other royals, including the Duke of Windsor, whose inconsequential grave is off to one side. In 1986 a new plot was day next to his for Wallis Simpson, the Duches of Windsor, a grave marked at first with only a simple wooden crossifit now has a store marker). # ribute Modernist Design In Gaudí's Barcelona

by S. Irene Virbila

ARCELONA — One of the great pleasures of visiting Barcelona is discovering the city's ricb heritage of turn-of-the-century architecture. L'Eixample is the name of a quarter filled with Modernist buildings by three important Catalan architects, Lluis Domenech i Muntaner, Josep Puig i Cadafalch and the city's beloved Antonio Gaudi, whose Pare Guell grada Familia, attract as many visitors as the Picasso museum.

One of Domenech i Muntaner's landmark buildings on the Carrer Mallorca is now a store that he and his Modernist colleagues might have appreciated. Bd Ediciones de Diseño was founded by a group of young Barcelona architects and specializes in furniture and household objects designed by architects and artists. At the store you can find work from the new generation of Catalan and Spanish designers as well as new edi-

Gaudi designed for the first-floor offices of Casa Calvet (Carrer Casp 48), a building the architect designed in 1902. There's a whimsical armchair with a heart-shaped back, stiffly scrolled arms and bold, curved legs in honey-colored oak ($2,280). Gaudi's chairs never jab or poke; he considered the body when he worked out the form. This chair is actually comfortable. An endearing threelegged stool from the same set has a low back curved around one corner of the triangular seat ($1,530). The most dramatic piece is a and monumental unfinished church, the Sa-tall asymmetrical mirror framed in elaborately carved waves and scrolls. You can rately carved waves and scrous. Fou can order it in natural oak ($2,925) or gilded ($3,915) like the original Calvet mirror. No detail in Gaudi's buildings was too insignificant to be redesigned. Windows, doors, door handles (tiradors), even the traditional mirilla (peephole in a door) got his attention. The store has had eight of Gaudi's cast brass fitting designs reproduced: the mirillas and tiradors he set in the doors of Casa Calvet, and door handles and knobs from Casa Batllo and Casa Milá, Each of these fluid designs is cast in solid brass, hand-polished and protected by a transparent glaze. The sinuous shapes fit the hand and seem to express the motioo of turning and pulling. Gaudi's signature is engraved on the back of each piece: $15 to $55 for knobs and handles (except for the tirador Calvet, which is $815; and the mirilla Calvet,

THE store also produces special edi-tions of works by other historically important designers, including furni-ture by the Scottish architect Charles Rennie Mackintosh, Among these are pieces de-signed in the 1920s for Miss Cranston's Wil-low Tea Rooms in Glasgow. The Willow chair ($1.635), table ($1,800), and coat and umbrella stand ($1,505) are made of oak that is painted silver and inlaid with violet glass. The store's philosophy is to reproduce such pieces as exactly as possible. A handsome tall-back chair in black ARIS - The recipe seems really quite simple. Take three of France's respected culinary names - Poilâne (bread). Petrossian (smoked salmon and fole gras) and Duboeuf (wine), Weave their ingredients into the overall concept of a modern cafe-bistro with a choice of 20 ddferent sandwiches and sandwich-like preparations, and toss in a menu of multicolored cocktails. Create a modern, no-nonsense decor, put on some lively music, train a crew of students and out-of-work actors to make sandwiches, and voilà, you have one very popular chain of casual restaurants known as Oh! Poivrier!

If anyone has wondered how the French would propel the cafe into the modern age or how they would deal with France's first fastfood generation as it grew to adulthood. Oh!

Poivrier! supplies a response. Oh! Poivrier! is not the only restaurant or group of restaurants in France to tap the youthful French audience - there are numerous not-so-fast-food enterprises to be found all over the country — but Poivrier's approach is such a winning alternative that it is worth noting.

OR the chain, which began in 1985 as a simple concept and a single café on Avenue du Maire la Avenue du Maine, has now grown into six very popular Paris restaurants serv-ing more than 3,000 diners each week, spending an average of 100 francs for a full

Oh! Poivrier! has succeeded by embracing certain classic French concepts (quality, amhience, the freedom to stay as long as you wish) and discarding others (a professionally trained staff, a classic repertoire, traditional decor, limited hours.)

While the neighborhood café has succeeded by offering quick, inexpensive snacks and meals throughout the day, it has suffered in recent years as a result of the French attempt to look, and feel, more up to date. Sullen waiters, flabby baguettes filled with pale strips of ham and bland cheese, and noisy pinball machines, may not be every modern Frenchman's idea of a good time.

Instead, at Oh! Poivrier! - which calls itself le bistro contemporain - one finds smiling young waiters dressed in baggy gray trousers and trendy yellow paisley shirts. You can pop in anytime from noon to midnight, 364 days a year. Everything about the place seems to say, let's have fun.

The decor is clean, severe gray and white, with slim venetian blinds at the windows, gray-stained oak tables, and a menu filled with the names of cute-sounding contemporary fare that seems to correspond with the young Frenchman's self-image.

F the nine "assiettes gourmandes" currently offered, the most popular with men is the Horizon Boréal, strips of toasted and heavily buttered Poilâne bread layered with the freshest of Pe-trossian's smoked salmon. Alongside, there are plenty of dressed salad greens and a little carton of lime sorber, all for 62 francs.

Women opt for the Trajectoire Givrée. crab meat and eucumbers layered on slices of Poilane toast, served with tossed greens, tomatoes, basil and fresh fruit, at 43 francs. The most popular wine is Georges Du-boeuf's Brouilly. (After all, a nation weaned on Beaujolais can't throw it all overboard at once!) The Ob! Poivrier! concept is to offer a generous looking three-course meal on a

So how does this differ from the fast-food trio of hamburger, fries and Coke? It doesn't, really. It's just a grown-up version.

The restaurants have become so popular

Oh! Poivrier! diner is 28 years old (four years older than the average waiter or waitress) there are plenty of older mothers there with their children for lunch, along with numerous older singles, there alone with a daily newspaper in hand.

It's no surprise to find that before long, Oh! Poivner! will be popping up in Lyon, Bordeaux, Nice, London and Rome, now that the organization feels it has saturated the Paris market.

E RIC Charrat, the 28-year-old director of the chain, which is owned by So-dexho, a French company that manages food operations for large corporations and hospitals all over Europe, feels that Oh! Poivrier! has hit on a winning concept, and as it expands, it will do little to change it. Every six months, the menu undergoes changes, as does the costume of the waiters. Each year, Charrat takes on student trainces from area business schools and puts them to work on marketing surveys, interviewing diners on their likes and dislikes, in an at-tempt to grow with their clientele. Right now, one student is scouring London to see how the concept can be expanded in the British market,

Although there have been numerous demands to open restaurants in Canada and the United States, they have been rejected, "I don't want to be any more than an hour's flight from any of the shops," insists Char-rat, who feels that the current success is based on a very fragile concept that will fall

Demotions in 1988 Michelin

PARIS—Aside from awarding its highest rating to the Paris restaurant L'Ambroisie, the 1988 Michelin guide has made two other changes in the three-star lineup: L'Au-berge du Pere Bise in the Savoie village of Talloires was demoted to two stars, and L'Oasis in La Napoule, outside Cannes, was dropped from the guide because it is closing, In discussing the demotions. Michelin spokesmen suggested that inconsistencies in the kitchen at the long-popular Pere Bise apart if it is the least bit altered or not carefully supervised.

caused the guide to retract a star. Pere Bise lost one of its three stars in 1983, then regained it in 1985, L'Oasis is closing because the owner, Louis Outhier, is opening a cooking school nearby. Together, these changes reduce the three-star restaurant pantheon in France to 18: of these, five are in Paris.

While in camp most people hang out on the open-air photographer's platform between the bunkhouse and the diner for as long as they can endure the cold and wind. People who take several books along find they don't finish the first; they can't resist running outside each time they hear excited back to camp. On such a trip campers are allowed to get down on the ground to stretch their legs if no bears are in the vicinity. The diner at the opposite end of the open-air platform from the bunkhouse is the social center. It's an old school bus mounted, like squeals from fellow passengers watching the latest antics of some bears.

Each group quickly gives its own names to the bears. One is dubbed Nick because of a scar under his right eye, which he probably got during the past mating season while fighting for a female's favor. Another is Grumpy because he only wants to gnaw at the plywood siding on the platform. Metal Mama, who is at least 24 years old, gets her name from her feisty protectiveness of her cubs and the metal tags in her earlobes, which biologists used up to 15 years ago when they started inserting plastic plugs in the bears' ears to identify them.

On one end of the platform is the bunk-house. Built like a Pullman car, it has four lower and four upper hunks on each side.

The guests begin to appreciate how precicus the water supply is when they see how it is obtained: by chopping a hole in the ice the other vehicles, on a steel frame perched above tires about six feet (about two meters) tall and two feet wide. The windows are about 10 feet above the ground. Conversation on the tundra becomes a blessed art in the absence of radio, television, newspapers or anyone around who has the foggiest notion of what's bappening in the world.

After dinner, when not interrupted by a hear noisily chewing off the drain pipe under the kitchen sink, travelers tell stories scarier than most make-believe ones you hear around camplines.

Last November, on one lundra buggy outing, Fred Treul, a 62-year-old industrialist from Wisconsin, took off his ahirt and showed the group his scars from an accident with a hear on a trip in 1983.

He was leaning out a window in a tundra huggy taking a photo when a bear he had not seen came up from underneath the vehicle and bit into his arm. As Treul, a calm, understated man, told the story, he turned to the man next to him and said, "Here, take my camera, I have to get a bear off my arm." The bear let go of Treul's arm only after someone hit it repeatedly on the nose.

The fierce wind and snow made a helicopter rescue impossible, so Len Smith, the manufacturer and owner of the tundra buggies, who was on that outing, put Treul in a tundra buggy and headed for Churchill.

In a short time the buggy fell through some ice into shallow water and couldn't be pulled out. Smith transferred Treul to a vehicle with tractor treads and started out again. The windshield wipers of that vehicle stopped working, so Smith slid back the roof and drove standing up looking over the windshield.

By the time they reached Churchill 13 hours later, Smith said, his hair was frozen into a helmet of ice. Treul was flown to Winnipeg for surgery on his arm, and today that arm functions normally.

Treul has been on the trip several times since his accident, the only serious one reported. "They're such heautiful animals," he said. "I don't hold anything against them. It was just an accident. It could have been just as serious if I had been in my car and been hit by another car.

The wind howls outside the diner as bedtime nears. The generator is turned off, and one by one the guests turn in - but not before saying goodnight over the edge of the outside platform to Metal Mama and her rambunctious cub, which has just learned to climb up on a ure and peek in the window of the diner.

This is also a good time to look at the northern lights. They float like sheets of pastel-colored silk across the awesome top of the world.

Tours start out from Winnipeg. The two major companies booking tours are Victor Emanuel Photo Safaris (P.O. Box 33008. Austin, Texas 78764) and Joseph Van Os Nature Tours (P.O. Box 655, Vashon Island, Washington 980701. Only Victor Emanuel has camping facilities. For those not camping, day trips to view the bears usually start at 8 A.M. and end at 4 P.M. Prices run from about $1,500 to about $2,000 for tours of 7 to 10 davs.

Next to the sky and the sea, KLM is one of the largest contributors to the world's supply of blue.

The blue in question spans countries, continents and hemispheres. And it's worn by KLM-ers whose job is solving problems of every imaginable hue.

If you have a language problem in Warsaw for example, there's a KLM office nearby to help see (or all through it.

It you need help to rent a car in Caracas, you'll find a KLM-er who'll be glad to help.

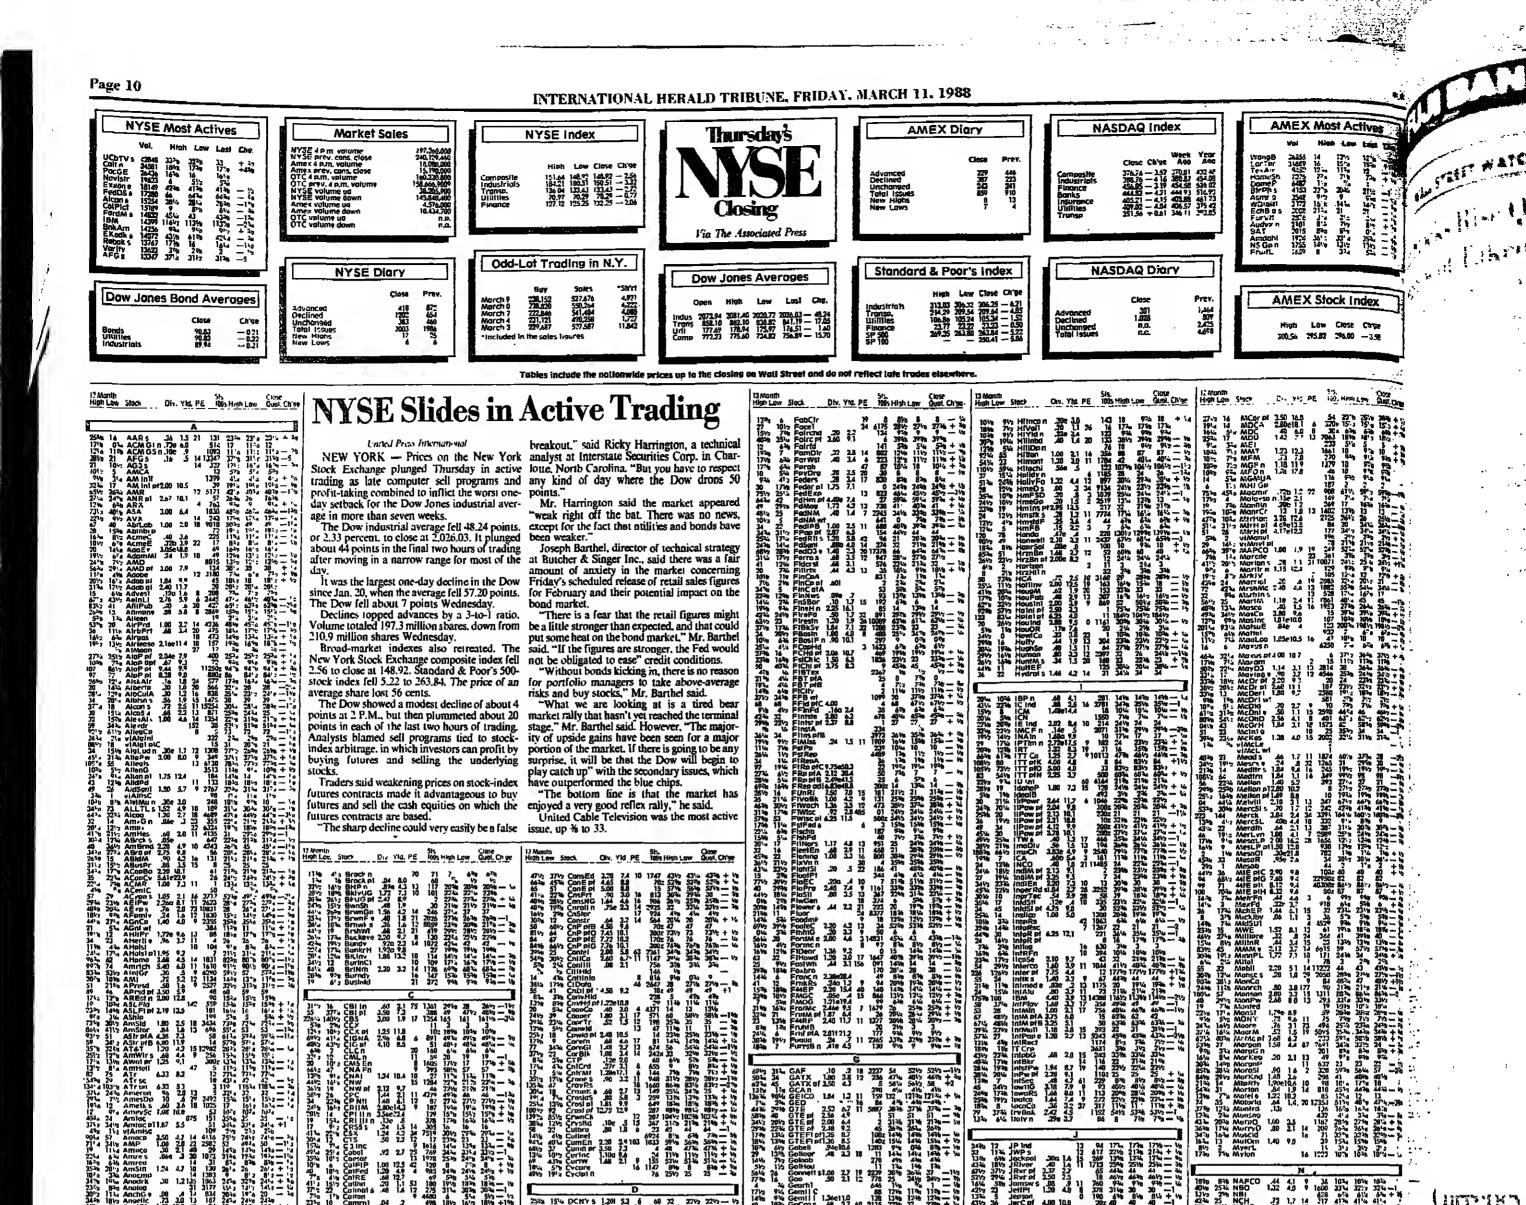

If you need to arrange for a hotel in Hong Kong or a dry cleaner in Dubai, we can arrange that, too. In fact, after almost seven decades of international travel, we doubt there's a travel problem we haven't seen or solved. Which is worth remembering on your next business trip.

After all, no one can rid the world of problems. So you might as well fly the airline that filled it with solutions: KLM.

Small Stocks Rise Quietly In Shadow of Takeovers

By ANISE C. WALLACE New York Times Service

EW YORK - Huge corporate takeovers have monopolized the stock market's spotlight since January. But these gaudy moves have overshadowed a quiet and powerful rally in small stocks. Since the beginning of the year, the stocks of smaller companies have outperformed the larger ones by a wide margin. And for the first time since 1983, many professional investors now say this advantage will continue for a sustained period.

Secondary issues "could outperform the stock market by an additional 5 to 10 percentage points before year-end," Carmine Grigoli, chief equity portfolio strategist at First Boston Corp., wrote last week.

Secondary issues were long

overlooked,

Secondary issues are those stocks whose total market val-ne is less than $500 million. Although largely identified with the over-the-counter market, secondary stocks include most of the issues traded on the American Stock Exchange and many of those on the New York Stock Exchange. On 28 of the 47 trading days since the beginning of the year, these smaller companies have bested the larger issues of the Standard & Poor's 500 index. Even without any dramatic news, such as a takeover attempt, scores of small companies have rebounded smartly from their December lows. As of Wednesd day's close, Ashton-Tate, a computer software company, had climbed to $30 from $17 in three months. Dress Barn, the retailer, was up 6 points, to $13.50. And Chemed, a specialty chemical company, had jumped to $37.25 from $28. Behind the rally are a number of forces. Small stocks took more of a beating in the October market collapse than larger issues. Several investment strategists at prominent Wall Street brokerage firms have issued recommendations stating that the stocks of these companies are too cheap to pass up. And because pension funds have poured hundreds of billions of dollars into funds representing indexes of larger stocks, small stocks were over-looked for several years, thereby creating market inefficiencies and opportunities.

NDIVIDUAL INVESTORS have been directing more money into the manual funds that invest in these securities, albeit slowly. This represents a welcome change in the market for some investors. Since 1983, the stocks of most small companies lagged behind the larger issues that make up the Dow and the S&P 500. During that time, the large stocks were buoyed by buying from leveraged buyout funds and the swelling index funds, pools of assets that are designed to match the performance of an index.

Despite the recent rally, however, there is not yet a return of the enphoria that gripped this market in 1983. Investors' memories of last fail's collapse, when dealers in these volatile stocks practical. ly disappeared, are too fresh. From the high set in Angust until the December low, these stocks plunged 35.4 percent. But with the better recent performance, there is a definite change in mood. Some pension funds are switching into these stocks as representing the best bargains in the market. As a result, firms/such as Morgan Grenfell Capital Management Inc. that specialize in these stocks are seeing new interest from corporate pencion funds. pension funds.

Individuals are even getting back into the act after fleeing this market for several months. In the first week of March, for instance, Baltimore's T. Rowe Price Associates witnessed a net inflow of $5.5 million into the New Horizons Fund, a mutual fund that specializes in these stocks. That represents a turn-around from January and February, when withdrawals exceeded inflows, a spokesman for the firm said.

New York Times Service NEW YORK — The battle between Pirelli SpA of Italy and Bridgestone Corp. of Japan over Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. is not simply another takeover con-test. It is a struggle for survival in the emerging global market for

For now, it is unclear which one will win control of Firestone, the third-largest tire manufactur-er in the United States. This week, Pirelli made an unsolicited $1.93 billion offer for Firestone. It is hoping to derail a $1.25 bil-lion agreement that would give Bridgestone a 75 percent interest in Firestone's worldwide manufacturing operations. The battle between these two foreign companies underscores not only the importance they place on the U.S. market but also the fact that the "globalization" under way in many other indus-tries has reached a denouement in the tire business. "The industry has changed a great deal in the last few years and, in order to compete effec-tively in the industry today, you have to be a global player," said Robert E. Mercer, chairman and chief executive of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., the world's largest maker of tires.

Statoil, Citing Cost Overruns, Swings Into Loss

OSLO --- Statoil, Norway's state oil company, said Thursday that it had swung into a record net loss of 1.88 billion kroner ($301.2 million) in 1987 because of cost overruns at a refinery expansion project. The loss was Statoil's first in eight years. The company had re-ported a net profit of 1,14 billion kroner for 1986. The net loss came despite record sales and a record profit in the petrochemicals division. Statoil's revenue rose 24 percent last year to 60.8 billion kroner. Its petrochemicals unit posted a profit of 520 million kroner.

Statoil is Norway's biggest company and Western Europe's sec-ond-biggest oil producer. The loss resulted mainly from a writedown of 3 billion kroner involving cost overruns at the Mongstad refinery priorit on Norway's west coast project on Norway's west coast.

"If you exclude Mongstad, the result is reasonably satisfactory." the company's managing director. Harald Norvik, said, "But with Mongstad, it's very poor."

Statoil's previous managing di-rector and its board were forced to resign late last year after it was disclosed that the refinery expan-sion had gone 5.4 billion kroner over budget. The allegations of mismanagement eroded confidence in both the company and in Norway's oil-based economy.

Statoil now says that the cost overruns may amount to as much as 9 billion kroner. Norway's parliament originally approved a bud-get of 6.8 billion kroner for the project in 1984. The 1987 net loss came in a period in which many oil giants man-aged to post gains in earnings despite sharp profit increases in 1986. But Statoil's profit was pressured in 1986 as well, falling 48 percent from the previous year. With oil prices now at their lowest levels in 16 months and denominated in a weak U.S. dollar, company officials said, prospects for 1988 also appear gloomy. The board assumes that there may be a considerable reduction in 1988 profits before extraordinary items," it said in a statement. "The board sees considerable uncertainty linked to the price of oil and currency developments.

But Statoil noted that writing down some of the costs at Mong-stad would reduce the burden on the company's balance sheet in the next few years.

Last week, the coopany announced a reorganization in which it will reduce its six divisions to three in an effort to control cost overnuns

Statoil's chairman, Jan Erik Jangangen, said that Statoil would not change its businesses, which range from North Sea oil exploration to gasoline stations. But he said the company was shifting its emphasis to profit from development.

Colt Accepts $525 Million

Buyout Plan

United Press Inte NEW YORK - Colt Industries Inc. approved Thurs-day a $17-a-share, $525.3 million takeover proposal from a group that includes members of its senior management and Morgan Stanley Group Inc. The offer is subject to con-ditions, including the tender of a majority of shares and "no better offer being received and accepted," the company said, Colt stock rose $4.625 to close at $17.875 a share in heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Colt, whose products include aerospace, automotive and industrial goods and Colt firearms, said Morgan Stanley would provide $460 million in interim financing for the transaction, subject to unspecified conditions. The investors would provide $200 million in

NEW YORK - Institutional investors and speculators said Thursday they would tender their shares in Federated Department Stores Inc. to Campeau Corp. if Campeau wios a court fight to advance its hostile bid and R.H. Macy & Co. does not increase its rival offer.

Some brokerage houses also advised their favor of an offer from Macy, the 10th-largest clients to tender stock in Federated to Cam-U.S. retailer. Macy is offering $74.50 a share for peau. "Our advice has been that you tender to 80 percent of Federated's stock and a swap of Some brokerage houses also advised their Campeao but you do it at the last minute in case the remaining 20 percent for 40 percent of the something happens," said Mouroe Greenstein equity in a merged Macy-Federated Inc. something happens," said Mouroe Greenstein of Bear, Stearns & Co. of New York.

are to begin next Monday as Campeau seeks to block Federated's "poison pill" defense. Campeau, a Toronto-based developer, is offering $75 a share for 80 percent of Federated's stock and $44 per share for the remainder. Campeau put the blended value of its bid at $68.50 a share, or $6.2 billion.

But Federated has rejected Campeau's bid in of Bear, Stearns & Co. of New York. Traders hold an estimated 40 percent of the shares of Federated, the fifth-biggest U.S. re-tailer. They are awaiting legal arguments that $64.75, down 87.5 cents, on the New York Stock Exchange.

The $44 a share portion of Campeau's offer could be worth more if Campeau succeeds in nullifying provisions in the Macy accord that would force Federated to pay certain expenses if h backed out of the deal.

Investors said it was possible Campeao could win Federated by midnight Tuesday, when its offer is to expire. But most said it was unlikely.

Traders said they would tender to Campean if it wins its court battle because they could receive $75 a share in cash for a majority of the stock. If Campeau wins the court battle and they have not tendered shares by the deadline, they could be left with the $44-a-share offer.

After weakening for much of the session, the pound recovered on a most of bullish sentiment and a denex of bullish sentiment and a de-size by traders to preserve the rise in sterling appeared unsustainmark.

The pound had fallen as low as 3,060 DM earlier in the day. It strengthened to close at 3.072 DM, fulle changed from Wednesday. The pound rose slightly against the dollar, ending at $1.8470, against $1,8465 Wednesday.

The dollar ended in New York at 1.6640 DM; down from 1.6705 DM at Wednesday's close, and at 127.95 Japanese yea, down from 128,10,

It rose against the French franc. Wednesday, but fell against the Swiss franc, to 1.3780 from 1.3805. Earlier, dealers in New York and Europe were perplexed by the in-tentions of the British government after a comment by Nigel Lawson, the chancellor of the Exchequer, and another by Prime Minister Argaret Thatcher. Mr. Lawson said that a further closed at 1.6645 DM, down from Margaret Thatcher.

Before Monday, the pound had held within a narrow range of 2.95 to 3 DM for The Federal Reserve said Thursday that M-I, the narrowest measure of the U.S. money supply, fell nearly a year. Recently the Bank of England had been trying to limit the pound's rise by intervening in the foreign ex-change market. Mr. Pohl said the West German central bank had been involved in that effort.

Mr. Pohl said that if the pound had been in the exchange rate mechanism of the European Monetary System, there would have been a re alignment. The mechanism limits the amounts member enrreacies caa fluctuate against one another.

The rescheduling of $12 billion in debt is crucial to preserve Egypt's scarce hard currency for essential commodities, much of which Egypt imports.

Assuming the Paris Club negotiations can be concluded, bankers calculate that debt repay-ments in 1988 will fall to $2.4 billion, from $2.6 billion in 1987.

Washington settled on a margin of 9/20 for $1.7 billion of debt, while bankers say that agreements with Spain for $430 million, West Germany for $500 million and Austria for $190 million have been reached on favorable terms.

But other countries, including Britain, Aus-tralia, Canada, Sweden and Norway, have balked at interest-rate concessions and are demanding that Cairo pay at least a 4-poiat interest margin - more in line with reschedulings for other countries.

Diplomats say that a $325 million credit reached in May with the International Monetary Fund has also run into an impasse as economic targets have been missed.

An IMF team is due shortly in Cairo for new talks.

A TIME OF CHANGE: A Reporter's Tale of Our Time. By Harrison E. Salisbury. Harper & Row, Publishers Inc., 10 East 53d Street. New York, N. Y. 10022.

Many a journalist, returning to the home office after a prestigious assignment abroad. might turn up his nose (in more ways than one, perhaps) at a local garbage-collection story. Not Harrison Salisbury. Shortly after com-ing back to The New York Times city room after six years of reporting from Moscow, he relates in "A Time of Change," Salisbury was handed a memo from the city editor, Frank Adams, asking him for a survey of New York's garbage and street-cleaning problems. Rather than brushing the subject off as be-neath his talents or position. Salisbury plunged in with characteristic energy and enthusiasm. He rode a garbage truck (the first Times re-porter to do so, he recalls with satisfaction), quizzed scholars about how the history of ancient civilizations was reconstructed from their trash middens, accumulated reams of quotes and statistics, and turned his research into a three-day series filling four to six columns in the paper each day.

That anecdote, in displaying Salisbury's great energy, curiosity and story-telling ability, belos explain why he became, and remains, one of the United States's most prominent and prolifie journalists.

In a previous book, "A Journey for Our Times," Salisbury wrote of his earlier years in journalism. Here, he recounts his career from the mid-1950s to the Reagan years.

The qualities of this memoir are, in large measure, the qualities of journalism itself. It is zesty, fast-paced, a tumbling: kaleidoscopic succession of places and events and personalities and details set down vividly but not always thoughtfully or originally. (Arnold R. Isaacs, WP) lives of the seamen who toiled to create then In the United States, there has long been as sense of romance about going to the sea, much of it due to writers such as Frederick Maryat James Fenimore Cooper and even, as Margat Rediker suggests, the historian Samuel Eine Morison. More than a century ago, writers such as Charles Nordhoff began an opposing tradition, replacing romanticism with descri-tions of hard reality, even brutality. Margat Rediker's excellent book clearly belongs to the second tradition, while at the same time foca-ing within the better-known historical frame-work of the Britisb seaborne empire and in Atlantic commerce in the first half of the 184 century. century.

Taking balf a century for his stage, Redite of Georgelown University's history depar-ment bas analyzed the social and calura ment has analyzed the social and caling world of the Anglo-American seaman, using a wide variety of sources, but making particular, ly good use of the records of the British High Court of Admiralty and the Colonial vice admiralty Courts. From these documents, Ro-diker tours the North Atlantic with Anglo-American seamen, following them to the rough and rowdy life in port towns. He then examine additional facets of their lives as collective workers and as wage laborers, moving on together additional facts of their area as concurs workers and as wage laborers, moving on togat language and culture and the relationships of seamen in terms of authority, discipline and rebellion. Finally, he turns to piracy and bus ditry at sea before drawing his conclusions, (John B. Hattendorf, WP

What He Said, and Denied, And Teammates' Reactions

"He's a moody guy."

Computed by Our Staff From Dispatches NEW YORK - The New York Mets in 1987, as reviewed by Darryl Strawberry in the April edition of Esquire magazine;

On the manager. Davey Johnson: "Nobody could figure out some of the stuff be was doing all season. We're hoping Mei [Stottlemyre, the pitching coach] will make a lot more of the [pitching] decisions in '88, because Mel knows the staff better than anyone.

"Man, I wonder all the time how many games this team would win if Whitey [Herzog, the St. Louis Cardinals' manager] were managing it." Catcher Gary Carter: "Our veterans didn't bring out the leadership they should have. Kid for one. He just quit.".

First baseman Keith Hernandez: "And Mex, I know he was going through a divorce and all, but who the hell knows where his head was half the time last season. Sometimes I wanted to say to those guys, 'Come on, Mex. Come on, Kid ... We're in a pennant race.'"

Teaministes Wally Blackman and Lenny Dykstra: "Wally spends too much time trying to act like Keith. But he doesn't have the game to back it up, Lenny Dykstra's the same way. He wants to be Keith too.

"Neither of them understands they can't wear his unit of the full field on his level. Keith is the only one who gets to be Keith. Lenny was one of the guys on this team playing for himself last season, instead of for the team. As long as be got his hits, be was happy. You know, strutting around. But these guys were always talking about me in the paper."

And, on Mike Lupica, who wrote the article after an interview with Strawberry at Sbea Stadium in January: "Writers write what they want about me. He twisted my words. He knows what the truth is. He wrote it in his own words.

"I wasn't mad at the time. I was just going over the things that happened last year. I wasn't trying to hurt anybody.

Comments by the other Meus, after Johnson closed the locker room door Wednesday, called a team meeting and ordered his players to quit iping at one another:

Pitcher Ron Darling: "Peace? Who knows? It's like a soap opera. Every once in a while, I lose the trend of the plot. Then they put in a zinger to keep the audience viewing. A new twist, It's getting silly. The Yankees used to get into this."

Carter: "I know in my own mind I never quit. I was hurting all year, and he can't pick on a guy who is hurting like that. "He's a moody guy. One time he wants one thing, another time it's another thing. That's Darryl."

Dykstra: "Why would he say that? He told me he didn't say that. I guess you've got to believe him. ... It's no big deal. What does it do to me and Darry? Nothing." Johnson: "There are too many distractions as it is. But that's life in the Big Apple." Add Johnson: "Whitey would have won 120 games."

Frank Cashen, the general manager: "Another routine day in para-ise." (NYT, AP, UPI) . . .

NBA Victory Los Angeles Times Service NEW YORK - What do you say after you've won 400 games laster than any other coach in National Basketball Association his-LOFY?

"If I had some talent," Pat Riley said after his Los Angeles Lakers had slogged their way to his 400th victory in the NBA, a bruising 104-99 triumph Wednesday night over the New York Knicks, "I would have won 500 by now."

Magic Johnson got 26 points, 14 rebounds and 9 assists as the Lakers ended the Knicks' 13-game win-ning streak in Madison Square Garden, their longest there since they won 20 straight in 1972-73.

Byron Scott added 22 points for the Lakers, who won their fourth straight — they have 21 victories in their last 23 games for an NBA best 49-10 record — hy holding the Knicks to 19 points in last period. Riley has never been voted coach of the year, even though his teams have won three NBA titles. Some maintain that only the Rockefellers inherited more riches than Riley when he took over the Lakers from Paul Westhead on Nov. 19, 1981.

That premise, however shaky, has been hard for Riley to dispute as long as he has the luxury of sending Johnson, Scott, Kareem Abdul-Jahbar, James Worthy and Michael Cooper onto the court. But publicly, anyway, Riley deflects whatever frustration he must feel with humor.

"Even you writers," he said Wednesday night to the crowd of reporters that had him pinned to a corridor wall, "could win 400 Jerry Reynolds, left, a guard for the Milwankee Bucks, and Ron Harper, his counterpart for the games with this team, I think." Geveland Cavaliers, lost touch with the ball but not each other. Cleveland won Wednesday, 117-91.

And Then There's the Team That Hasn't Won Once

The Associated Press

EDINBURG, Texas - This team really loves basketball.

It has been more than a year since it won a game. Some opponents don't even bother to warm up before taking the court. But these are the Lady Bronce of Pan American University, in the American South Conference, who have ended their regular season at 0-26. It's the team with the reputation as the worst in the United States. So something other than the thrill of victory has kept them picking themselves up from drubbing after druhhing as the cellar got deeper and deeper. "If they weren't so feisty, we prohably would have folded a long time ago," said Becky De Los Santos, a volleyball coach who inherited the team last summer after the previous coach

NEW YORK — Temple, the top-ranked U.S. college basketball team, and No. 2 Purdue are headed for the same place, the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament, but on different paths.

The Owls won their 15th consecutive game, beating Rhode Island, 68-63, Wednesday night for the At-lantic 10 Conference tournament championship. That assured Temple a top seeding in one of the four NCAA regional playoffs.

But Purdue, which had appeared to be headed for a top seeding, stumbled at Ohio State, losing by 71-60. The defeat won't cost the Boilermakers an NCAA bid, which was secured earlier by clinching the Big Ten title, but could affect where they are placed in the NCAA field.

In Morganiown, West Virginia, Temple won its third Atlantic 10 tourney in four years as Mark Macon scored 25 points and Howie Evans restarted the offense after Rhode Island had rallied for a 51-50 lead. "The key to this team is that they know how to win," said the Owl's coach. Don Chaney. "We are a good team, but I think we can be better if our team stays in its element."

That element is based on Evans assing the hall to Macon, the reshman star, and sharpshooter Mike Vreeswyk, who scored 17 points against the Rams, 26-6.

"A good cake has all the ele-ments in it," Chaney said, "Momma don't have the shortening, the cake fails. What is our necessary element? Howard Evans. Howie sets the table and the rest of the players just come and eat." Rhode Island also hopes to dine at the NCAA banquet.

"We outrebounded Temple, 39-30, and that's an unbelievable stat," said the Rams' coach, Tom Penders, That helped keep us in the game. We played the No. I team in the country with an awful lot of heart and scratched back into it."

In Columbus, Ohio, Ohio State scratched past Purdue on good foul shooting late in the game and a 12point second half by Jerry Francis, That left the Boilermakers' coach, Gene Keady, scratching his head.

"After the game I wrote, 'Finish the joh,' on the board. That's a question that was not answered," he said.

LOS ANGELES - It's had enough getting hurt on the field of battle, but when it happens elsewhere, as it has to a number of baseball players, it also can be humiliating. Here are some examples from a list compiled by Boh Sudyk of the Hartford Courant: Ron Kittle of the New York Yankees: Injured his neck helping to carry teammate Lenn Sakata off the field on a stretcher.

Alan Transmell of the Detroit Tigers: Playing the Frankenstein monster one Halloween, he fell from his stilts and injured his knee. Oddibe McDowell of the Texas Rangers: Suffered an eight-stitch cut in his middle finger while buttering a roll at the team's welcome bome luncheon.

Mickey Tettleton of the Oakland Athletics: Went on the disabled list with a foot infection caused by tying his shoelaces too tight. Joe Azcue of the Boston Red Sox: Ate four pounds of grapes given to him by fans before a game in Anaheim, California, and doctors had to be summoned to pump out his stomach as he began to ferment in a pool of perspiration on the trainer's table.

Doc Swigler of the then-New York Giants: Pitched one game,

P.J. Carlesimo got a new five-year contract Wednesday to coach Scton Hall's team after guiding the Pirates to their best season in 32 years, The Associated Press reported from South Orange, New Jersey,

The signing ended months of speculation on whether Carlesimo would be back for a seventh season at Seton Hall. He had compiled a 54-92 mark his first five seasons and the Pirates, with a 20-11 record and their best Big East finish, at 8-8, may have saved his job.

They will meet Georgetown in the quarterfinals of the Big East tournament Friday hut likely will get their first NCAA tournament bid no matter what happens this weekend.

"I'm happy," said Carlesimo, whose eyes frequently filled with tears. "I like it here. I like the Big East, I didn't, to be perfectly candid, think I wouldn't be here. I'm not being smart. I am very appre-ciative. But I thought it would happen all along."

Olympic Mount Further Downgraded

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Prohlem-plagued Mount Allan, site of the Alpine skiing events in the 1988 Winter Olympics, is not likely to be used even for World Cup races in the future. "I don't think the men's downhill will ever be used again," Jim Berwick, president of the Canadian Ski Association, which is responsible for staging all World Cup events in Canada, said Wednesday. He cited the strong winds at the top of Mount Allan and the fact that the temporary lift that had served the upper slopes has been removed.

Mount Allan still could be used for slalom and giant slalom events, but Guy Christie, Alpine chairman with the Canadian Ski Association, said "it could be a while" before an international event of any kind is staged.

popular request) be analyzed, or even hereafter mentioned. Instead, we shall attempt to give the people ("populus") what they want.

First, the punch line to an old Catskills joke that was told not quite entire in a recent column about four men each asking the waitress for a glass of water. Astonishingly, there seem to be thousands of Americans who did not know this famous joke, for we have three requests for the punch line.

You will recall that the fourth man, upon asking for a glass of water, said, "And I want mine in a clean glass." Here's the punch line:

"Waitress comes back with four glasses of water on a tray, looks over the group and says. 'Which one wanted the clean glass?'

Some lintpicking grammarian ("captious pedant") will observe that the first paragraph ("above") equates the English word "people" with the Latin "populus." which is singular, and ask, "How can you then write about giving the 'popu-lus' what 'they' want? You can only give a 'populus' (singular) what it wants.

fn the past, we have answered such questions impatiently. ("You finally get up the nerve to write to a newspaper columnist, and the only thing you can accuse him of is ought to be ashamed of yourself.") Now, though, responding to anticipated popular request, we confess that we deliberately create such grammatical conundrums t"conun-dra") to get under the skin of our more sensitive readers and make them go away.

When judging presidential can-didates, we tend not to care what a candidate says he would do about taxes. We are pretty sure he won't do anything at all about taxes unless he can make the House Ways and Means Committee, the Senate Finance Committee, the Speaker of the House, the Senate majority leader and the banking, real-estate and two dozen other equally powerful lobbies sweat when he glares

By Howell Raines

New York Times Service ONDON - Country music is L easy to come by in Europe and in the British fsles. There is local imitation country music: you can hear it sung in Danish in trucker bars in Jutland, for example. There is imported mainstream American country: Willie Nelson will play Wembley Stadium here in April.

But if you want originality something made on this side of the Atlantic that still has the bite and twang that drained from so much American country about the time they opened Opryland ---then there is only one man to see. He is Hank Wangford, who bas perhaps the most unusual curriculum vitae of any country musician on either side of the ocean. Wangford is a singer and song-writer and the host of "A to Z of C uy singer named Hank Wang-ford. It was also kind of Britishtaking the ironic side of country music and extending it. Anyway Hank takes the mantle of pain and Hank starts crying in his beer and Sam Hutt feels much better." A month later, Dr. Hutt made a tongue-in-check appearance in the Wangford persona at a fair concert, "It was a terrific success, a very wacky gig. A band formed then and there, and we started doing the country music circuit. In the 12 years since, the Hank Wangford Band has been through three incarnations. Playing for the equivalent of $1,000 to $1,500 a night has not made Mr. Wangford rich, but it has established him in the entertainment press as the "anarchistic godfather of British progressive country music," Hank Wangford is a snaggle-toothed fellow with a Willie Nelson ponytail and a convincing Appalachian accent and the kind of hangdog face that you would expect to see on someone pump-ing gas in Slap Out, Alabama. His flat off Portobello Road looks like an outpost of the Country Music Hall of Fame, jammed with gui-tars, mandolins, dobros and a souvenir rug from Twitty City.

There is also a piano, recording equipment and a word processor on which Hank Wangford writes his songs. As a songwriter, he works the borderland between ridicale of and reverence for things American. For example, a song about Billy the Kid comes out as "Silly Billy."

A Wangford specialty is what he calls "songs from the dishwater area of life." These run to titles like "If You Ain't Married Sunnyside Up, Try Divorce Over Easy," "I Ain't Married But the Wife Is" and "Never Wear Mascara When You Love a Married Man.

Many are full of the kind of proletarian fervor you might get from a country songwriter raised by Communists. That happens to be the case with Mr. Wangford, "s good left-wing boy from Lon-don" whose father was a senior editor of The Daily Worker. His having immigration officers func-"Christmas in Strangeways" is a tion as music critics.

haunting lament set in a British prison of that evocative name. On the Line" recalls how a group of neo-fascist Skinheads attacked the Wangford band at a Labor Party concert, and it contains the songwriter's most poetic line: They slipped through the crowd like a shiver of fear.

The band mixes its original songs with old American tunes that you will not hear on any Top 40 station. That is because Mr. Wangford, an accomplished musicologist, has dug up some ne-glected gems. "Cotton Mill Colic" is a classic "30s protest song. Then there is "Will There Be Any Yo-deling in Heaven?," recorded in the '30s by the Good Sisters from Muleshoe, Texas. "I can't make it any better than reality," Mr. Wangford comments.

What is striking about the orig-inal compositions is the way they preserve a genuine hard-country quality in songs that avoid the predictable lyrics, canned emotion and homogenized sound that has made a wasteland of vast tracts of American country. These pect a writer from a staid country to bring to so distinctively American a musical idiom.

But this should not be surprising, given the trans-Atlantic migration patterns of popular music. Everyone knows bow the Beatles were influenced by American rock. American country mnsic had its roots in the folk songs taken to Appalachia by English. Scottish and Scots-Insh immigrants. In bringing country back over bere, Hank Wangford is simply adding another lap to the creanve circuit.

His is a music that the more nontraditional American country music fana would enjoy. But his agent says that a 1986 date at the Lone Star Cafe in New York was canceled when the Immigration and Nationalization Service denied work permits to the band on the ground that it lacked artistic merit. Hank Wangford, the selfdescribed "po-faced country singer," would say it's just another example of the bad luck that keeps him crying in his beer. Hank Wangford, the songwriter, might find some way to write a country song about the dangers of
